IMAGES IN SURGERY

A DECEITFUL RIGHT ATRIAL MASS

José Máximo [*1,2], Rita Costa [1,2], Elson Salgueiro[1,2], Paulo Pinho [1,2]

[1] Department of Cardiothoracic Surgery, Centro Hospitalar Universitário S. João, Porto, Portugal

[2] Department of Physiology and Surgery, Faculty of Medicine, Porto University, Portugal

* Corresponding author: jcmaximo@me.com

This large atrial mass was removed from a 33-year-old patient admitted to the emergency department for severe venous congestion. Its hard texture, grayish discolouration and wall infiltration prompted radical excision and partial atrial reconstruction. Histopathology was compatible with a thrombus, discarding malignancy.

