

A DECEITFUL RIGHT ATRIAL MASS

José Máximo ^{*1,2}, Rita Costa ^{1,2}, Elson Salgueiro ^{1,2}, Paulo Pinho ^{1,2}

¹ Department of Cardiothoracic Surgery, Centro Hospitalar Universitário S. João, Porto, Portugal

² Department of Physiology and Surgery, Faculty of Medicine, Porto University, Portugal

* Corresponding author: jcmximo@me.com

This large atrial mass was removed from a 33-year-old patient admitted to the emergency department for severe venous congestion. Its hard texture, grayish discoloration and wall infiltration prompted radical excision and partial atrial reconstruction. Histopathology was compatible with a thrombus, discarding malignancy.

