

VENOUS GANGRENE: REMINING A VASCULAR CATASTROPHE

Pedro Novais Lima¹, Joana Cruz Silva¹, Anabela Gonçalves¹, Manuel Fonseca¹

¹ Department of Angiology and Vascular Surgery, Centro Hospitalar Universitário de Coimbra

* Corresponding author: pedro_lima20@hotmail.com

A 85 year-old, female patient, with an active colon neoplasm, was diagnosed with extensive ilio-femoro-popliteal deep vein thrombosis. She presented with severe oede-ma of the left lower limb and a cyanotic foot. Pedal pulses were palpable. Despite immediate anticoagulation, the patient expired at 72h.

